IDENTIFYING WHICH PHASE OF THE PRIMARY CYCLE THE MARKET IS IN AND ITS LIKELY TREND

- The first step is to identify the occurrence of the last primary cycle bottom (trough).
- Count forward and identify the current week number.
- Next, identify which phase of the primary cycle the market is in.

Which phase?

Bullish or bearish?

- Determine what type of the three basic patterns is forming for this primary cycle.

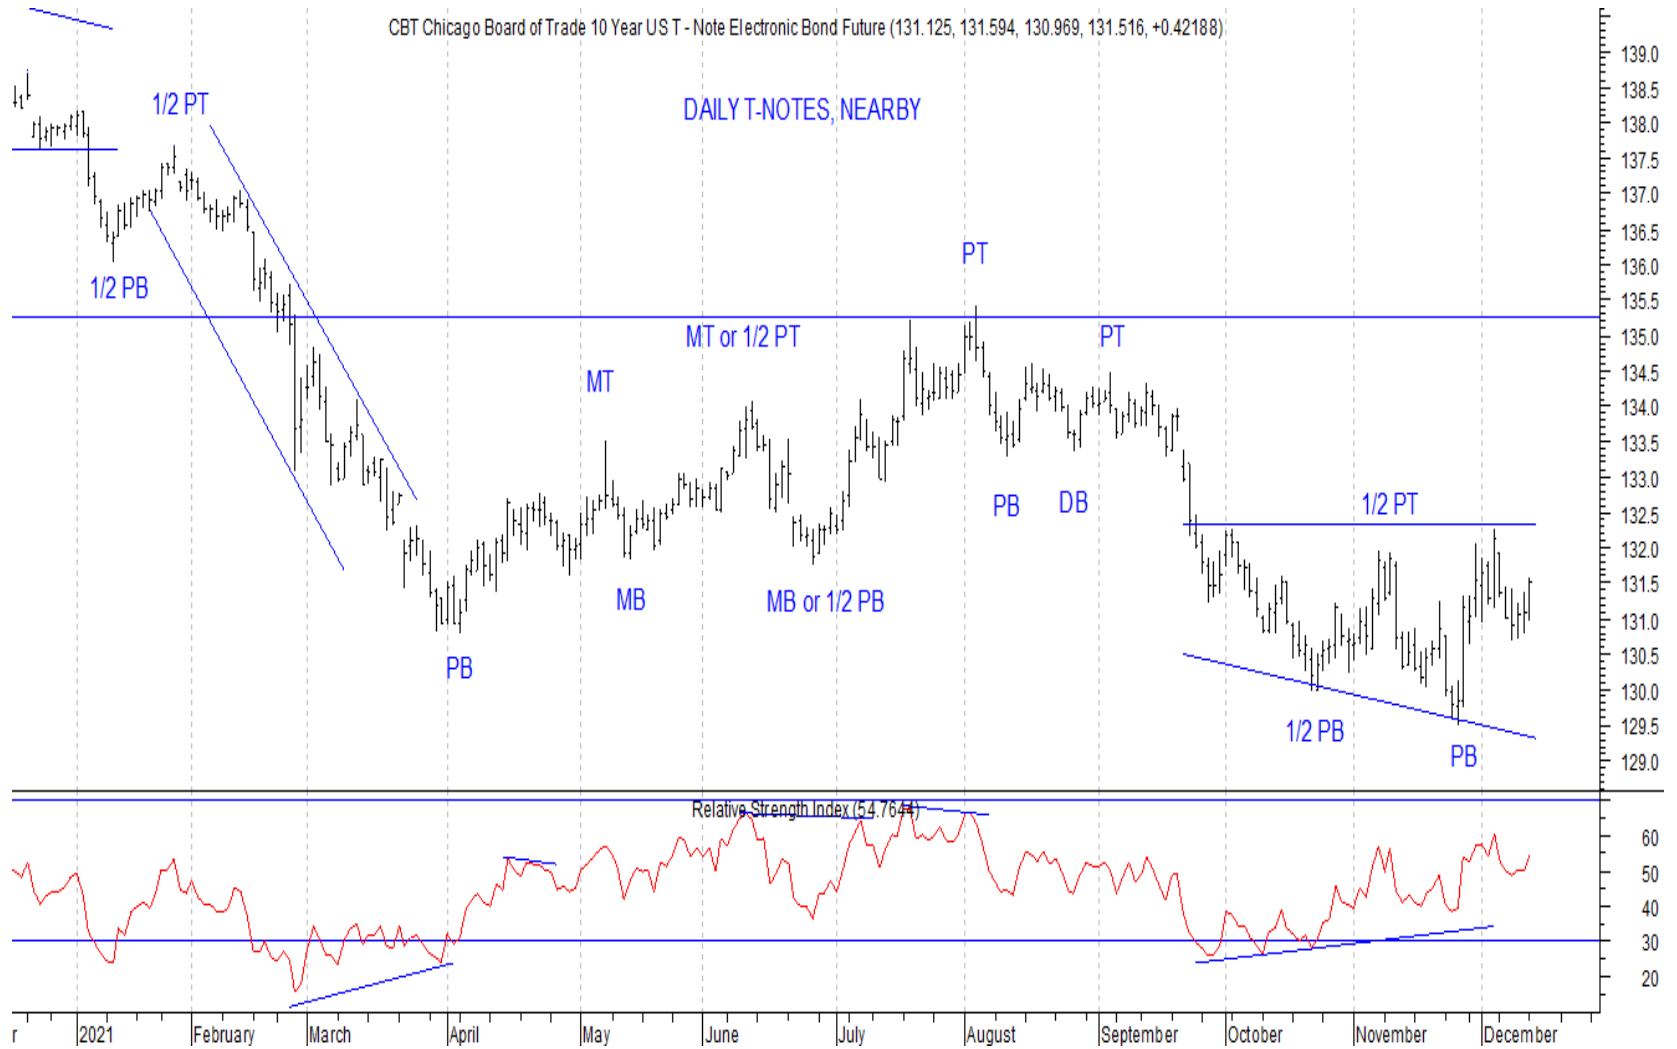

THE THREE BASIC TYPES OF CYCLE PATTERNS

BASIC RULES FROM COURSE ONE

- The first phase of every cycle is bullish
- Last phase is either bearish, or if the market has been bullish, it is where the largest decline is likely to occur
- The lowest price in a bull market is always the start
- The lowest price in a bear market is always the end. Once the start of the cycle is taken out, it turns bearish
- See how far you have come!
