

FAQ on “MMA Daily Options Report with Derek Panaia”

Q: When does this service begin?

A: It officially begins January 15. However, it is currently underway in a beta version with the Options + group that started immediately following the most recent MMA Options webinar on November 24.

Q: How often does Derek make postings in this new service?

A: On average, Derek will post once a day. But there are many occasions where he will provide multiple updates, especially when a trade is readying for entry or exit. In addition, Ray will post whenever he sees a cycle reversal developing and may ask Derek to suggest an options strategy related to his thoughts. There may be days when no postings are made because the most recent postings are still applicable and not in need of any adjustments in timing or pricing.

Q: What is Derek’s expertise based on? Who is he and what is his experience as a trader, especially with options?

A: Derek Panaia is a savvy, successful, and veteran options trader going back four decades. He has been a subscriber to MMA’s report for over 20 years and is in frequent contact with Ray, Gianni, Pouyan, and Wyatt, who are each top MMA market analysts. Derek has a unique talent for blending the analysis of MMA’s analysts with his own Trend Strength Indicator and other tools like COT (Commitment of Traders) and broader trader sentiment readings to attain higher probability trading setups. His option strategies provided on the MMA Options’ webinars over the past 2+ years have been consistently profitable (let’s define “consistently” as approximately 70%, which is much higher than the average option trader experiences), with a large number of trades resulting in 2x or greater profits.

Q: Aren’t options risky? Especially on Futures? Can’t you lose even more than you invest?

A: Options trading is risky, and one can lose more than they invest if they enter “naked” short positions on options. But Derek’s trades are not “naked”. The trades are simple long calls or puts, or spreads, which have limited risk that do not exceed the cost of the trade itself.

Note: One should not trade options if one does not understand how options work. It is not a market for beginners in trading. MMA offers a primer (recording) on how options work from the very first options webinar conducted with Derek.

Q: Does this new service include stocks and ETFs? Or is it just options on futures? If I don’t trade futures, can I still use this service for ETFs and stocks?

A: The focus is on futures and their options because they actively trade almost 24-hour per day and capture intraday highs and lows better than markets that mostly trade for 6-8 hour market days. We need those actual highs and lows to calculate more accurate price targets, and we base our option strike prices on those calculations. Yet many of the users of this service prefer to trade ETFs and their options rather than futures. The timing will be the same in either case, so that can be done but will require price adjustments since ETFs do not quite accurately reflect the underlying commodity or financial index like futures do. Many subscribers make the adjustment on price for ETF and still experience success with these strategies. Options on futures are more appropriate for those with substantial funds to trade due to the high leverage factor of futures.

Q: How is this new MMA Daily Service with Derek different from the current MMA Daily Service?

A: The current MMA Daily service is written shortly after the market closes for the next day’s outlook. It covers commentary on the day’s activity and strategies for trading futures the next day. The new service takes into account the outlook for the next day, based on the current MMA daily and weekly outlook, and refines entry and exit points, and even strategies, for options based on how the market is performing after the opening. If there are any surprises during the day that require further adjustments, Derek's makes them. Derek will also provide commentary on cycles coming up, with revised price targets and other indicators he watches closely. Ray will also offer insight on markets when geocosmic critical reversal dates are setting up in alignment with cycle reversals as he sees them unfolding. This is where Ray will be spending most of his time sharing his outlook on markets in 2026.

Q: What is the cost of this new MMA Daily service with Derek?

A: It is $3600/year, or $360/mo.

Q: Are there any special offers if I am a current subscriber to the present MMA Daily Service? Or, if I am not a current subscriber, can I get a special offer if I sign up for both daily services – the current one and the new one with Derek?

A: Yes. The special offer – good until June 30, 2026 – is $500/mo or $5000/year to receive the “bundle,” which includes: 1) both the current and the new MMA daily services 2) the full MMA Weekly Markets reports (DJIA, S&P, NASDAQ, Gold, GLD, Silver, SLV, Bitcoin, Ethereum, T-Notes, Euro, Swiss Franc, Yen, Crude Oil, and Soybeans). GLD and SLV are the ETF's on Gold and Silver.

After June 30, these “bundle” prices will increase to $600/mo or $6000/year.
